

OVERVIEW

Asset management information is vital to those authorities responsible for maritime safety assets. Decisions about investment, service delivery and maintenance depend on the quality of information provided.

AMS understands the importance of management information and has developed its systems to ensure that key information is captured, analysed and presented to its customers.

INSPECTION REPORTS

AMS has a range of standard inspection reports that cover the equipment and systems it services and maintains. Information is consolidated from inspection reports into a database for transfer to the customer's IT system.

Inspection reports and data formats can be customised to meet customer requirements.

FAILURE REPORTS

AMS operates a rigorous system for recording, and analysing failures. A standard failure report format is used to gather relevant information and to provide a basis for applying corrective actions.

Failure data and statistical analysis can be provided in a format to meet customer's IT systems and any other requirements

DEFECT REPORTS

AMS operates a defect reporting system that targets equipment problems that might not initially result in a failure. A standard defect reporting system has been developed that enables analysis of defects and the application of preventive actions before problems lead to operational failures.

Defect analysis and feedback assist us to select the most suitable equipment for application to the maritime environment. Trends and modifications are reported back to manufacturers to assist them in improving their products.

CONDITION REPORTS

AMS customers receive regular comprehensive reports on their assets through our planned inspection system. The frequency and detail of these reports can be tailored to individual customer requirements. Use of digital imaging and standardised formats aid clarity and understanding of the information provided.

AUDITS

All of AMS's operations are subject to regular, planned internal and external audit. Customers can be provided with copies of audit reports on a regular basis to ensure them of continued conformance of our service to their assets. AMS has a number of trained quality auditors and can assist customers with services when required.
